

Dear C. Sporn,

So often I hear it is not a "right" to serve in our military forces, so why don't they allow gays, lesbians and women serve in separate units? If people join to serve their country and not themselves, they should not object to serve in a unit made up of people like themselves. The Tailhook scandal costs for sexual harassment proves my point. Women (heteros) wouldn't sexually harass other women since they're no interest, and gays and lesbians would expect it. If patriotism motivates them to join, or the benefits of army paying them while supplying food clothing etc - then they shouldn't expect to find a sex mate the minute they join. There wouldn't be the hesitation of a soldier, seeing a fellow soldier bleeding on the war field would eliminate the fear of aids if he were to assist him.

Please bring that up for debate on your programs. I'd love to hear where I'm wrong. (my friends say I'm a religious hate-minded Republican)

I love Brian Lamb - He is always neutral when two people are opposites in opinion.

A wonderful host - It is hard to monitor the shows he does without showing a slight favoritism. He's very professional. A rare one.

Yours truly,

[REDACTED]
(age 73.) Not you think I'm a sweet young thing! He!