Dear Mr. Sikes:

On Sunday afternoon, April 25, 1993, several of us were watching the "March on Washington" to see firsthand this event of those who were claiming their sexual preference. We were representative of the mother of a son who is in the top level of management with an international company, the former wife of a senator, and myself, who is the widow of a serviceman who served on a submarine during World War II.

Much to our amazement during a portion of the 4:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. segment, Lea Delaria, Master of Ceremonies, made several references to "fucking Hilliary Clinton," "fuck Hilliary," plus acting out of the part of herself (Delaria) having an orgasm.

We could not believe this was an example of freedom of speech which would allow a person to degrade the First Lady, who is also the mother of a teenage daughter, to be held in such low esteem.

We were under the impression there were Federal regulations to prevent vulgarity from being viewed since there have been occasions when obscenities have been deleted.

If this is an example of those who were claiming their sexual orientation preference flaunting their views over C-Span, what will they do if allowed to do so in our military?

We are looking forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

[REDACTED]
