Dear Brian,

What's incomprehensible to me is that news professional$ can't understand why many people complain about the under-reporting of the Waco trial. The trial has been going on for weeks, and news sources have given their attention to anything and everything else. Tonya in the headlines and 6:30 news relentlessly, day after day, to cite only the most recent example. The events at Waco reached us all. Speaking for myself, although this opinion may be shared by some of your callers: during the events, it seemed as though the ATF and FBI acted irresponsibly. A trial should have presented evidence to confirm or disprove. Did it? Who knows? To make matters worse, now that it's time for the defense to present its evidence, the defense rests.

I'm not a conservative, not a radio call-in listener, wouldn't try to find Rush Limbough even out of curiosity. The only rumors I've heard have been those mentioned on C-Span, and only there. I would just like to know what's been happening at the trial.

Can the same Intrepid Reporters who pursued with such zeal the family and friends of Vincent Foster and gave us the results night after night, day after day, have no curiosity about the background of events at Waco?

May I add to all the others' my thanks for C-Span.

Sincerely yours,
