Dear Mr. Brian Lamb,

Close-Up Washington D.C. was a remarkable experience which every high school student should attend. The program is filled with exciting activities to help introduce government operations, functions, and programs through memorable monuments and lectures. I attended a session of Congress, visited the Supreme Court and ate in the cafeteria, met a Japanese delegate who talked about their culture. At the capital, I met Senator DeConcini, Senator McCain, Representative Stump and sat in Representative Stump's chair. I thoroughly explored the Capitol (getting lost a couple of times) and the Library of Congress. I also visited the History and the Air and Space building of the Smithsonian.

Our group went to art exhibits, plays, national parks, and monuments such as Lincoln, the Wall, the Soldiers, and viewed the Washington monument. The sights were spectacular. I also visited the White House, heard a lecture about defense in the Pentagon, listened to a Senate bill hearing in the Senate Art Gallery and an appropriation bill in the House.

On the "Free Day", my group visited Arlington and the historical site of General Lee's House, the Challenger memorial, the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the Eternal Flame, President Kennedy's grave, and witnessed the changing of the guards. Other sites included: Fredricksburg, the Union Station, the Old Post Office, Georgetown, and a few Universities for lectures. In one of our bus lectures, we toured the city viewing the differences and discussed a mural displaying six important individuals.

I also rode both the Metrorail and traveled in the tunnels below the Capital. My group, short on time, ran underground from Representative Stump's office to meet Senator McCain on the steps of the Capital building, in less than five minutes. (In this city, a person definitely needs to know where they are going, otherwise, they will get lost.)

I had a wonderful time. Again I thank you for your contribution and support to my educational experience. This was an experience well worth the money. It is my wish that other students broaden their horizons by participating in this wonderful program. I really appreciate your help for the productive relationship your company has shared with the Close-Up programs.

Sincerely,
