THANKSGIVING WEEK ON C-SPAN:

Kennedy School Forums and the "Great Americans" Series

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- Thanksgiving week on C-SPAN offers a number of special programs to cable viewers interested in the "who's" as well as the "whys" of public policy issues.

Monday through Friday - November 24-28 - at Noon ET, C-SPAN will televise public policy forums sponsored by the J.F. Kennedy School of Government in conjunction with Harvard University's 350th anniversary. The daily topics are as diverse as smoking and health policy to foreign views of American politics. National figures are featured each day including New York Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and former National Security Advisor McGeorge Bundy.

On Thanksgiving Day, C-SPAN's viewer call-in programs will be replaced with the latest installments of the cable network's "Great Americans" series. Each holiday, C-SPAN offers hour-long personal profiles of people who are deeply involved in the country's public policy process.

Featured on Thanksgiving Day are Pamela Harriman, widow of Averell Harriman and current chairman of the political action committee "Democrats for the '80's" and Joseph Coors, vice chairman of the Adolph Coors Company and founder of the Heritage Foundation, a conservative Washington think tank. Although ideologically different, both are long-time political activists who offer their time and funds to national issues and party politics.
