Dear Brian:

Personally I don't care about the overdrawn checks in Congress. There were no public funds involved, unlike the Savings and Loan scandal, which the public will be paying for, for a long, long time. I think that this is a political ploy used by the Republicans during this election year when George Bush and his administration are blaming Congress for everything that has gone wrong or not gone at all during his presidential term.

On another issue, Brian, I am so tired and even suspect of C-Span and you constantly referring to The Washington Times as a reliable source for whatever the issue of the day happens to be. Also, there seems to be a Times reporter, columnist, editor, on one of your shows at every opportunity. I, along with many of your viewers are aware of the ownership of the Times belonging to Sun Myung Moon, the leader of a world wide cult. How can I then believe anything being printed in that paper. If you do not want C-Span to suffer in credibility, then ease off on promoting this paper.

Sincerely yours
