Dear Brian,

I got up this morning (5:30am), got the paper, sat down, and turned on the tube, y'know?, the usual routine. I was incensed, at comments/attitudes of both of the Wall St. Journal columnists and the Bartley guy, but not enough to write any about, then, I walk back into the house awhile later and there's the ex-Head Bushman, on tape from yesterday at the Coverdell Good Government Committee thing, (whatever it was, it continues as I write this) and Man, did you guys know what it'd take to set me off. (and down)

The short passage I heard was something to the effect of how the mission to Somalia was a "strictly humanitarian one", and that, "No one could see the reports from Somalia, and not be moved to action", and (in honor of his memorable trip to Japan) I nearly threw up my Oatmeal/Toast breakfast, right there in the living room floor, but, suppressing the gag reflex, made it to my computer instead.

Yea, strictly humanitarian, my one question to this pseudo Texas shitheel would be, just how in the hell did he manage to stomach the reports coming out of the civil war in the old Yugoslavia of starvation, rape and ethnic genocide, (that continues today), during his administration?

Really, the absolute gall necessary for any remarks from him or his accomplices in brainwash, is of an unspeakable depth. Is he still on the dope? As I have written to local papermills, it seems that everyone covering these occasions of "verbosus vomitus" seem to forget the brouha created when the media met the SEAL Teams on the beach in Mogadishu. This strictly humanitarian mission, was fueled by the (failed) military invasion of Somalia, and anyone who doesn't realize that is doing themselves a disservice in any discussion of the Somali fiasco. I believe myself, that nothing happens by chance in this world, (from the hand of man) and in that belief rests the inescapable conclusion that the whole mess was dreamed up, and executed in vitriol, for no other purpose than to hinder the Clinton Admin. as much as possible, never, NEVER, in the history of the United States has a lame duck president committed the country to such an undertaking as the African Fiasco, and that, added to the inaction on the situation in Bosnia, for so long, should be (and have been) the political "stake" in his dark heart, but I can see that is not to be and he will continue to hover in the shadows, like Nosferatu, accompanied by his patient, companion, and biographer Renfield Ailes.

Which brings me to some comments concerning the call-in's that I witnessed earlier, that hadn't been important enough to comment on.

Concerning Zhiranovskys' (off the cuff spelling) mental status in the remarks of the female co-host, Anti Semitic statements show a person to be, at the most bigoted, certainly not insane, and his relationship to the other elected (and otherwise) heads of State of the world should be to show him the respect due his position, no more or less, but I wonder why no one calls up, even the possibility, of his "playing the media", with actions and reactions designed to call attention, or confuse, as to whatever the hell his real agenda is anyway? It also seems very convenient, (but considering, again during the Halcion Days of Inaction, that all we sent the Russian people were McDonalds, cigarettes, and RocknRoll, why should they not long for the good ol days of Uncle Joe and the boys in the KGB?) that this "hardliner" from "out of nowhere" would come on the scene and make it necessary for the re-birth of the defense industry in this country, and the old bugaboo of untold, nuclear destruction, once again, a part of the general mentality.

One last observation, is that you guys, and I say you guys including the girls too, seem to be more and more not addressing the concerns of individuals who call in with comments including names, dates and general/specific data that would seem to be the domain of you folks electronic, journalistic careers tossing them off with comments like, "got your point" and then when offered for discussion the reporters saying something like, "no comment" or going off on some, distended reply like the Bartley guy did today to the woman who called in and asked why the media didn't feast on the attempted suicide of Robert McFarland (an, ane?), he went off on some linguistic fishing expedition and never said a word about what this woman asked. Hell, since I got the time and inclination, I'll tell ya, the Clinton Admin. was seemingly on a collision course with destiny (on a weekly scale) for a long time, I wrote letters to the AZ Rep., maybe even you all, asking them who or what was the "mole" in the system, that seemed to be self-destructing daily, and then this lifelong friend of the President (and professional confidant of the First Lady) supposedly shoots himself in a parking lot in Virginia, with an antique pistol, and for a while things calm down, no giant leaks of information to the press corpse (that's no typo) and things mellow out, til the information starts snowballing concerning this same, now deceased, lifelong friend, and his/their connection to this WhiteWater Development Corp. story, that not only has legs, but runs like FloJo, out of the fetid food holes of people like Bob Dole, Roger Ailes, Rush Limburger, and the ex-Head Bushman. Tying back to my comments that nothing happens by chance in the political maelstrom, forces at work in this country, contrary to what the woman from the Journal says she believes, could have very easily protracted the rise of the young man from Arkansas, and set up this albatros, in spades, I mean really Brian, I'm not well versed on the time frame of WhiteWater, was it before, during or after the Watergate burglary, which showed the real machinations of modern men, gifted with the custody of History? Surely, someone like Gordon Liddy (talk about scary people with power, or who once had power) could have put something like this together, don't cha think, or don't cha? Somebody had something on Vince Foster, and was using him to sabotage the Clinton Admin. from within, this I believe, and its all just a little too convenient!

Praise God, and pass the Ammunition
