I WATCH C-SPAN BECAUSE C-SPAN WATCHES FOR ME

To say I watch C-Span is an understatement in the least. I not only watch C-Span, I use it. Whether it be in a formal debate or in casual conversation. C-Span has enhanced my knowledge of numerous issues to give a clear and decisive opinion on a given topic.

C-Span's coverage of events in their entirety gives one the feeling of knowing the real story, in contrast to network news practice of taking a line or two out of context.

C-Span offers a broad range of issues in such segments as the question and answer seminars between President Regan and members of the Close-up group. The live call in shows that follows immediately afterwards lets the viewer step in and become involved.

C-Span's coverage of our House and Congressional subcommittees in action is a main factor that contributed to my interest in national politics at the age of sixteen.

C-Span allows the viewer to better evaluate national politicians than he/she could have by reading a few paragraphs in a newspaper. One segment that scores high marks for this is the coverage of National Press Club Meetings.

These are the reasons that I state ----THAT I WATCH C-SPAN BECAUSE C-SPAN WATCHES FOR ME.
