problems, domestically
or in country - would not believe we were in a recession for a year after we were there

4. He is weak at making a decision, will not for that area is a

Dear Brian,

I've previously written you, pro and con, and appreciate receiving the small, handy U.S. Constitution etc and info.
about C-SPAN. Thanks, again!

Now, I'm in a dilemma about the Presidential candidates!
I would never be able to vote for "Slick Willy" Clinton -

His priorities:

1. complete governmental

2. no way can he do anything about the deficit with his spending

3. He preaches family

So, I would vote for

5. He balanced his state's budget because he had to, legally.

6. An editor of an Arkansas paper admitted he was better at running for office, than running an office, and that he was no administrator.

7. His environmental goals in Arkansas were nil - terribly handled - polluted streams, etc, no great thing to brag about.

8. His wife, Hillary, has been silenced temporarily, but if he's elected, his very liberal views need be seriously heeded.

9. He is glib, and has an answer to all problems, but many are vague, ^{meaningless!}

10. His promises smothering for everybody - "very slick"

11. He calls himself a centrist, but is very liberal, (looks up to Carroll ^{Quincy, his college mentor})

Bad
"Tragedy and Hope"

12. He has had no experience in foreign affairs - maybe he deserves Saddam Hussein?!

President Bush's priorities

1. He does have 2 beliefs, family values that I trust
2. He has flawed economic
