

Praise

West Hartford, Ct 06110

C-Span
400 North Capitol, Suite 650
Washington, DC 20001

Dear C-Span,

I find your Moscow Evening News re-broadcast one of the most valuable programs on television. It gives me insight on some of the complexities of international relations. It supplements the lack of reporting of many events by our network TV and local papers.

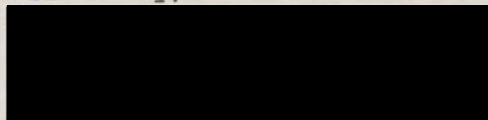

My biggest problem is the erratic scheduling. While I accept the problem of the evening omission when Congress is in session, I do not accept the morning omission when you do some of the live call-in broadcasts which you use as fillers during Congressional breaks, etc.

Most of what is said during the call-ins is of little real news. It is predictable, due to the usual format and listener following of the programs. There seems to be no need to pre-empt something which many of us consider an important part of our viewing. Can't you break into such programs for your usually scheduled programming? We turn to C-Span at 7:20 AM and are badly disappointed. Please consider your faithful followers.

Also, other foreign news is of interest. The parliamentary debates from Canada, Australia, etc. and the British question period are good. Are there more of such you could carry? If so, they would be appreciated. Also other foreign new broadcasts. There also should be more notices of when they are scheduled.

Thank you for your consideration of these comments.

Sincerely,

Praise

[REDACTED]
W. Hartford, CT 06110
October 13, 1994

C-Span
400 North Capitol, Suite 650
Washington, DC 20001

Dear C-Span,

I find your Moscow Evening News re-broadcast one of the most valuable programs on television. It gives me insight on some of the complexities of international relations. It supplements the lack of reporting of many events by our network TV and local papers.

My biggest problem is the erratic scheduling. While I accept the problem of the evening omission when Congress is in session, I do not accept the morning omission when you do some of the live call-in broadcasts which you use as fillers during Congressional breaks, etc.

Most of what is said during the call-ins is of little real news. It is predictable, due to the usual format and listener following of the programs. There seems to be no need to pre-empt something which many of us consider an important part of our viewing. Can't you break into such programs for your usually scheduled programming? We turn to C-Span at 7:20 AM and are badly disappointed. Please consider your faithful followers.

Also, other foreign news is of interest. The parliamentary debates from Canada, Australia, etc. and the British question period are good. Are there more of such you could carry? If so, they would be appreciated. Also other foreign new broadcasts. There also should be more notices of when they are scheduled.

Thank you for your consideration of these comments.

Sincerely,
[REDACTED]