Dear Sir:

I was going to write this letter yesterday after the travesty you had on Washington Journal but could not get to it. It was just as well since today was instant replay of yesterday, only duller. I am sure C-Span's powers-that-be can hardly wait for Congress to return to work.

There are a couple of points to be made regarding today's program and the two bits of femininbe pulchritude, two great arguments for masculinity, both of whom were not list-less, but surely were listless.

The Lady from Emily gave us the nauseous Bonior/Gephardt line about robbing the poor to give to the rich. She then told us her organization contributed $8,500.000 to Democratic women candidates, plus, I suppose a decrepit male or two along the way. That means that Emily's 34,000 members EACH had to contribute a minimum of $250 and somewhere a poor person or two got stiffed by those donors.

Later on, the charming Cahill, obsessed with bringing down Senator Packwood, copletely ignored a MALE caller's question about Kennedy, Dodd and Studds, as well as the relevant question concerning Reynolds, in regard to her bewailing the loss of all that "talent".

As to Finley, another feminist with a different mustache, she insisted on terming the Pro-Life adherents as "anti-Choice". She is exactly wrong; they are pro-Life and anti-infanticide and dissemination of babies' body parts about which she would appear to be hypocritically horrified.

Yesterday you had two critters equally entertaining, a Baptist something and a feminist with a brush-cut. I have learned to be suspicious of "ladies" with brush-cuts and to abhor bigots who lurk behind religious facades.

Such was James Dunn, terrified by thoughts of separation of Church and State if the poor are given vouchers for access to private, read Catholic, schools. There are not too many Catholics in the ACLU, even less in People for the American Way and "Americans" United for Separation of Church and State. All could be reduced to one single organization, "Americans" United in Hatred against Catholics.

The irony of guys like Dunn, and the organizations that preach the same sermon of hatred, is that they are well aware of the disaster that constitutes our public schools. As long as immorality flourishes, as long as sexual freedom is encouraged, as long as God is kept out of the classroom of those public schools, they are perfectly contented that our students, just as Speaker Gingrich stated, receive a high-school diploma which they cannot read and never know what "education" means.

Personally, I believe that C-Span is doing itself irreparable harm with the class of individuals it has foisted upon an avid C-Span loving constituency. I found it interesting that there was no single individual to refute what any of these panelists of the past few days had to say.

Better you should have closed up the store till Congress could rescue you, .
