Thank you for excellent program. I am retired and have become a devoted watcher. I have a suggestion which may satisfy or remove my frustration when I have watched a debate in House (Senate), sit through the voting, see that time has expired and, momentarily ~~get~~ distracted (or have to leave room), find that I have missed the result and next subject is ongoing. Could you use the running announcement on the bottom of the screen to report result of "last vote, S. H.R. --- etc, was passed (or defeated) (No.) to (No.)" ten minutes or so later but prior to next vote

I hope to get up enough nerve to call in when appropriate subject is being discussed to suggest that number of committee assignments be reduced so that the members can be expected to remain thru complete hearings of their committees. I think its disgraceful to see important witnesses testifying to one or two members who get replaced by other straggling in characters who ask questions answered 10 or 20 minutes ago. Then maybe we could hold them accountable.

Thanks you again

Very truly yours
