Re: Booknotes (C-SPAN. Sun.)

Dear Mr. Brian Lamb - nice July 31 '94

To counter the notion that many viewers would think Mr. Colman McCarthy somewhat aberrant for espousing a vegetarian lifestyle, may I say that this viewer thinks him exceedingly enlightened because of his animal 'rights' views, as well as his non-violent philosophical stance. As an ethical-vegetarian, I have read Mr. McCarthy's columns & editorials & books throughout the years & so support and eloquently articulate my own thinking in this area! I, thoroughly. (whoops - split infinitive) enjoyed the interview - THANK YOU!

This viewer, also, thoroughly delighted in that relaxed chat-you enjoyed with Mr. Halberstam, Will & McCullough ~ what a treat! I have read many of their wonderful books and considered the hour and a half a pure treasure ~ I taped it for later perusal, since it was so rich in charm & content and deserves another viewing. This is Television at it's most satisfying!

Thank you,

Sincerely,

Ps. I might be one of the number who buys books and, for a myriad of reasons, reads only 25% of same. Obviously, one purchases a book in the hope that it will be read, but pressures of domestic chores, caring for family, career and volunteer duties leave little time for such personal pleasure. I think perhaps that women, who still do most of the necessary homemaking chores, are particularly prone to this syndrome. Our hunger for 'knowledge' takes a backseat to real-life requirements.
