Dear Brian:

I received a telephone call today from a man at Anadolu University in Turkey asking for information about C-SPAN. He had spent 9 months at the University studying uses of various media in education, and developing plans for expansion of their television work with nationals in Germany and now the countries that were formed from the southernmost republics of the old Soviet Union. They are transmitting by satellite to reach the Turkish and Muslim populations there. I spent a few weeks with them in their planning.

I told him that I would write to you and ask you to send him descriptive material about C-SPAN, especially is programming.

The address is:

Since retiring from the University, I have been working with about a half dozen other colleges and universities in their media activities, writing a book on distance education, and working with Virginia Waring on a biography of her late husband. But I miss the numerous contacts with the cable industry that were a part of my life at the University.

If there are costs associated with getting information to [REDACTED] please send me a bill.

With every good wish,

Sincerely,
