Mr. Brian Lamb,

I listened to your broadcast this morning on satellite and as always, enjoyed it as it is one of the only programs that tries to look at our political system honestly. We need this very badly and it is true that the media is very biased. What I think has happened is that the media (at least %80 of it) supported Clinton wildly, some probably because they thought the couple were better looking and more popular, like Kennedy. However, now that the people are aware of the serious media bias, I think it will spur the media to back off and try to pretend to make amends.

The other part of the puzzle is that the Universities are very left wing in their teachings of political science. I have finally after two years gotten some correspondence back from a local University in my area and they only sent me the goody letters indicating they were pleased I was interested. But it also came out in the newspapers that they only invited the ultra left wing speakers to the University which meant a very unbalanced program. That is being slugged out now.

I think what political science leaders think is that since they are idealists, they are equal to the most advanced understanding of Christian ideals. What they don't know is that the Christian system works while their system is only tolerated as an imitation. Further, it appears out here that the only religion being attacked by the activists groups is the Christian religion. This says to me that none of the others represents a threat to the empires they have built. These University departments are to blame for much of our political and economic troubles, I think, although there may be a few (very few) exceptions.

If the political science department at the local University ever decides to answer my letters truthfully (or should I say, answer the questions asked) I would be glad to send you a copy. So far they are very devious.

Sincerely,

Reps. Tom Foley for some reason ignores my letters. Why?
