Dear Mr. Lamb:

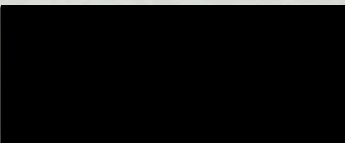

I am thankful for C-SPAN and appreciate the way you conduct your part of the programming. I especially like the Journalist's Round Table. But of course, I like many others, think we know better than you how to run your business. (Just kidding of course.)

I don't get to watch as much of your programming as I would like, so perhaps I have been missing some important thoughts expressed on your journalist's show. In discussions on the Clinton Health Care Plan, I have never heard anyone point out the involvement of the "big five" insurance companies in the planning of the so called "managed competition" idea, and how much they would benefit from the plan to the detriment of the smaller companies who are actively opposing the plan. I would appreciate some more liberal or even progressive journalists appearing on the program who can discuss issues differently than the main line media, since they don't fear retaliation by loss of advertising.

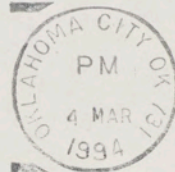

I and many other poor liberals can not afford to make long distance phone calls to comment or ask questions of you or your guests (which, of course is the reason that politicians and talk shows get more conservative callers), but I can afford paper, stamps, and envelopes. And I have access to my daughter's computer and printer, so that is the way I have to communicate.

Thank you again for C-SPAN.

Sincerely,

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK 73106
