

Dear Mr. Lamb, FANEUIL HALL
MARKETPLACE
Boston, Massachusetts, U.S.A.

MIDDLESEX-ESSEX

When evening falls, the lights come on at New England's most visited marketplace where food, flowers, fashion and fun surround you. Historic Faneuil Hall, built in 1742, is in the foreground and the Custom House tower is in the background.

Having the opportunity to visit Boston, Massachusetts ~~has~~ at the age of 15 and touring the greatest historical sites in the nation is ~~now~~ definitely a rarity among teenagers. I have learned much about the unsung heroes of the American Revolution, such as Robert Newman and William Dawes, and how their sacrifices were equal or sometimes greater ~~to~~ those of the famed Paul Revere. From the scenic views at Boston Harbor to the realistic (in terms of 1621) Plymouth Plantation, the educational experience I have acquired ~~is~~ has been invaluable in opening my eyes to the numerous, yet different aspects of the American Revolution. As of tomorrow morning, I will have visited the world-renown Ivy League known as Harvard University (my school of choice for many years).
