

April 11, 1994

Re: The Close-Up trip to Washington D.C.

To Whom It May Concern:

Hello, my name is [REDACTED], and I just got home Saturday evening from the Close-Up trip to Washington D.C. It was one of the most exciting events that I have attended while being in high school. I met lots of new people from several different states and learned what kinds of things they liked to do. I really enjoyed my roommates and our "neighbors" that were staying near our room.

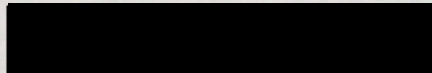

The many trips that we took to the monuments and to other places of interest, such as the college for the deaf, were fun and exciting as well as educational and trivial. I had a great time at the Capitol Building. Looking at the dome from the inside was a marvelous sit. We met with important people that were willing to sacrifice their own time to come and speak to us and answer our questions (the lady at the college for the deaf was a kick).

This trip provided hands-on experience with our nation's capitol. Close-Up showed me things that were only pictures in books and words on paper before. I highly recommend this trip to whoever is interested in learning more about our nation's capitol and meeting more people. Thank you again for providing such a program.

Sincerely,

A large black rectangular redaction box covering the signature area.A small black square redaction mark.A black rectangular redaction box covering a line of text.