

Mr Lamb:

For your information,
Missed you on 5-28. Hurry back.

6-2-93

Arlington, Texas 76014
June 2, 1993

Dear Mr. Waldman:

I watched your performance on C-SPAN Friday, May 28th. When a caller lamented Bill Clinton's loss of respect among world leaders, you stoutly defended him, declaring that Clinton's lies and his wavering on subjects from Bosnia to world trade were nothing compared to George Bush getting sick in public on his trip to Japan.

When someone asked what the Democrats had to do to improve Clinton's image, you said: "We just have to....er...I mean the Democrats have to..."

Nothing I say now can do more than that little slip to highlight the subjective view you hold on events you "report."

The liberal news media remind me of the medieval Church: Powerful, doctrinal, intolerant, vengeful. You, and John Palmer, and Robin whatsername of the New York Times were like two monks and a nun from the fifteenth century transported to the present, but reassuring each other that the sun and stars revolve around the earth, that raising taxes causes employment, and that putting black racists on college faculties creates brotherhood. If only the heresies of Copernicus, George Will, and David Brock could be kept from the ears of the peasantry, the Church's power would remain unchallenged.

As an heretical conservative, I have this recurring nightmare where a spectral figure in a cowl flashes a press card and binds me to a stake piled around with dry brush. Tell me, Father Waldman. If I reject Phil Gramm and Dick Armey and all their works and ways, can I find peace in the Liberal Paradise?

Copy: Mr. Brian Lamb
C-SPAN
400 No. Capital St., NW, #650
Washington, D.C. 20001

002594 JUN 8 93

[REDACTED]
Arlington, Texas 76014
June 2, 1993

Mr. Myron Waldman
Newsday
1150 Fifteenth Street Northwest
Washington, D. C. 20071

Dear Mr. Waldman:

I watched your performance on C-SPAN Friday, May 28th. When a caller lamented Bill Clinton's loss of respect among world leaders, you stoutly defended him, declaring that Clinton's lies and his waverling on subjects from Bosnia to world trade were nothing compared to George Bush getting sick in public on his trip to Japan.

When someone asked what the Democrats had to do to improve Clinton's image, you said: "We just have to...er...I mean the Democrats have to..."

Nothing I say now can do more than that little slip to highlight the subjective view you hold on events you "report."

The liberal news media remind me of the medieval Church: Powerful, doctrinal, intolerant, vengeful. You, and John Palmer, and Robin whatsername of the New York Times were like two monks and a nun from the fifteenth century transported to the present, but reassuring each other that the sun and stars revolve around the earth, that raising taxes causes employment, and that putting black racists on college faculties creates brotherhood. If only the heresies of Copernicus, George Will, and David Brock could be kept from the ears of the peasantry, the Church's power would remain unchallenged.

As an heretical conservative, I have this recurring nightmare where a spectral figure in a cowl flashes a press card and binds me to a stake piled around with dry brush. Tell me, Father Waldman. If I reject Phil Gramm and Dick Armeay and all their works and ways, can I find peace in the Liberal Paradise?

Very truly yours, [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

Copy: Mr. Brian Lamb
C-SPAN
400 No. Capital St., NW, #650
Washington, D.C. 20001

002594 JUN 8 93