Dear Brian

Possibly the enclosed, will help in the perspective of your programming. Also if you would be kind enough to inform your listeners of the fact that there already exists a "Bureau of Public Debt", see enclosed letters dated 12-6-84 and 1-14-85. The difference between this account and the new proposed roadwink is that Congress cannot write loans against it. It goes directly towards the debt, and is not available for congress to spend. Maybe you could check this out for your listeners. This could be the one and only way for the American People to ~~stop~~ Congressional spending. Open Forum is this country's best hope, Booknotes is great, suggest

Keep up the good work.

"Democracy" Where Did it Go?
And Why We Have to Get it Back

To find out, we have to go back in history. The real question is how far do we go back? And when did the light of Democracy start to flicker?

Two things led me to the middle of the 1800s. One was a story told by Indian Chiefs to their children. It is said the Light of Democracy shined bright for 100 years, then it started to flicker. This would tend to indicate that from 1776-1876 the light shined brightly. First question, what happened in 1876 according to American history? Revolution, one currency, and the Federal Reserve was founded.

The other statement that led me to find out what happened was a statement made by a wise old Scotsman at the signing of the Constitution. He stood up in the back of the room when it was signed and stated, "Gentlemen, great your Democracy idea is, but it will only last as long as the people do not know how to get the money out of the government."

So this was my venture, to find out when it was that the people were able to get money from the federal government. How it came about, when it started, what things added to its spiral down to the present, where Congress performs treason each time it goes in session. So from that premise, my search to look for major paradigms (changes) from 1876 to present 1992.

From 1876-1886, Federal Reserve Banking System, and at this time the federal government funded its own Research and Development. There were no granting agencies to educational institutions, universities, or private enterprises. Income tax was instituted by federal government. Ten years later, 1886 "First Stock Market Crash."

1886-1900, Educational Institutions always used private funding for Research and Inventions. Inventions were funded privately by wealthy individuals or companies. Edison was funded by J.P. Morgan, and Henry Ford; Nikola Tesla, by George Westinghouse, J.P. Morgan, and Western Union. During this time, universities had no real format for scientific investigations. It was around this time that universities took Edison's format for scientific investigation and started doing research. Whereas prior to this time, it was all education. Meanwhile, educators were pushing the federal government to fund research, federal government responded by setting up the first Granting Agency, the National Science Foundation. Prior to this move by federal government, all monies stayed within the federal government. Research was carried out by the Corp of Engineers and the ONR, Office of Naval Research. This was the start of a leak in the Federal Reservoir, and it grew exponentially since.

At present, look at how many "Tax Free" granting agencies there are in Washington. There is no responsibility for return of this money, and there are many more of these "one way streets" in Washington. Now they are being installed in the states and local governments.

1929-1936 (approx. 50 years). "Second Stock Market Crash," FDR institutes "The New Deal." The New Deal allows civilian contractors to apply for grant monies to rebuild infrastructures and puts in place Social Security. President has control over domestic and foreign policy. President still controls congressional spending, up until the time Harry S. Truman leaves office, "The Buck Stopped There." When Harry Truman left office, there were 250 special interests in Washington, and Congress took control of domestic policy (spending). No longer did the buck stop at the President's desk. Congress has it, and still does at this time. The ping-pong game is started. JFK and LBJ's time, Congress removes Social Security money, plus all its dividends, to pay for Vietnam (war). Police action, special interests grew 20,000 to 30,000. During the 1980s, this grew to 65,000.

1985-1992. "Third Stock Market Crash." Consumer Price Index is no longer useful, price of product has stayed high while the size has shrunk 1 lb = 10.5 oz. This is deflation. "Recession plus deflation equals depression." CPI was changed to CDI, Consumer Domestic Index, whatever that means. Meanwhile, it seems the Stock Market functions in 50 year cycles, worth a lot to those who know or knew.

1970-1992. Exponentially during this time we are graduating from colleges de-educated grant writers who have been taught what not to know. This has turned into a system of the less you can show you know, the higher you will go, until you reach the top power position and you are guaranteed to know absolutely nothing about anything. So much for PhDs, MDs, MBAs, MBs, CPAs and BA's.

The system has become a bureaucratic nightmare that is self-protecting, by eliminating anyone who has knowledge or is a threat to it (so much for merit). Let it be said that when a society becomes a slave to the bureaucratic system, it is time to rip it out. The system is supposed to function for the people, not the people for it. A bureaucratic system is meant to be used to solve problems in the society, and when one problem is solved, it is moved to solve a new problem. You do not create a new bureaucracy for every problem or issue. You set priorities for the problems. Otherwise you will have all the people working for the system, and that is not a democracy, it is the pathway to social communism, whether the American people want to believe it or not. We passed the half-way point last month, when the federal, state, and local government employment figures passed the private sector by 400,000 people.

This does not include the 65,000 to 70,000 special interest offices in Washington, tax-free and with free travel written off as operating expenses.

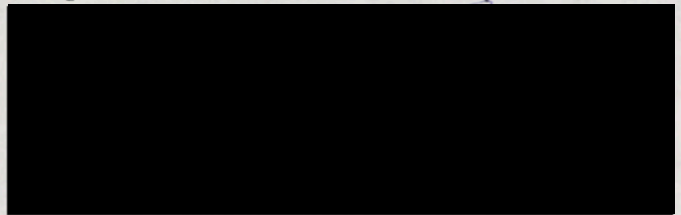

Many of these offices employ anywhere from 10 to 100 people. They write grants, pay lobbyists, support PACs and create* issues for legislation which will release federal money to support them and their lifestyles tax free. There are anywhere from 3 million to 7 million of them, that is approximately 2 to 5% of the U.S. population. Guess who's working to convince you your vote doesn't count? The system that is in place has to be removed.

Otherwise it will have a hold on every cell in your body, and no longer will we be a "Nation of free people under God."

*P.S. There's a difference between what is an issue and what is a problem. Not all issues are a problem. Issues can be resolved, problems have to be solved. The system has ruined many people and has made many of them something other than human beings. It has become a "Design for Disaster." It has to be removed and democracy reinstalled.

The Scientific Method

*Definition: A logical approach to the solution of problems. Scientific Methods require: (1) "strict honesty;" (2) the ability to withhold a decision until all the evidence is in; and (3) the desire for truth.

It seems the U.S. government and the Environmental Protection Agency have decided that the Scientific Method is an invalid approach for investigation of problems. **An example of this is the substitution of wooden carving boards with plastic ones; concluding afterwards that the wooden boards were better and safer all along, since the components of wooden ones are bacteriocidal.

Let it also be noted that when the Scientific Method was replaced with what I call the "Political Expert Method," our wallets and purses started to empty. Once the Political Expert method was in place, it was soon clear (surprise, surprise) that it had to be followed with the establishment (lo and behold) of an Ethics Committee to oversee and monitor the established Political Expert Method. Recall that the Ethics Committee was invented by those same people who removed the Scientific Method.

The following questions arise:

- (1) How do parents explain this conundrum to their children?
- (2) How can we expect our children to be honest after they have been educated following the Political Expert Method?

Computer Models Threaten Scientific Methods

*Computer models can give only assumed predictions. When presenting computer models, two parts of the Scientific Method should be kept in mind; specifically, the ability to withhold a decision until all the evidence is in, and the desire for truth. Otherwise, computer models will become foundations for the "Political Expert Method." Indeed, in some cases of environmental studies, they already have. What this will do is to remove monies that would otherwise fund good scientific research and replace it with the Political Expert Method, thus totally eliminating the Scientific Method which calls for (1) strict honesty; (2) the ability to withhold a decision until all the evidence is in; and (3) the desire for truth. All this is accomplished by a logical approach to the solution of problems.

Academia cannot afford to throw money away on assumed results of computer models. Since when did academia accept and place itself on the foundation of assumptions

P.S. Computer Models are not fact and should not be used to legislate policy at the expense of the tax payers. To do this will not only waste a lot of tax money, but indirectly remove the Scientific Method of investigation and replace it with the Political Expert Method, threatening all of honest scientific inquiry.

Garbage, Garbage, Garbage

Why does it seem that the American mob, the EPA, and the news media are implementing the Russian Communist's Manifesto - to bury America in its own garbage?

This manifesto was enunciated by Nikita Krushchev to the United Nations during the Kennedy Administration. Krushchev stated to the U.N. General Assembly, "We [i.e. the Communist government] will bury America in its own garbage."

It is ironic that the American media, when quoting this statement, conveniently leaves out "in its own garbage;" and why do "they" [i.e. the "mob," EPA, and the media] feel that their children are not included in this burial ritual, or have they just overlooked this "minor" point?

It is my suggestion that "they" [see above] wake up their common sense before they bury us all in their "intelligent stupidity." One thing is for certain: When America sinks, they and their children will also go down with the ship. American Democracy is this world's last best hope and not the "New World Order."

Constituents and People
Is there a difference?
You bet there is!

The Constitution starts by stating, "We the people..." What has happened to these three words in the past 50 years?

It seems Congress and the Senate have interpreted this to mean, "We and my constituents..." What is wrong with this? For one thing, too many senators and congressmen no longer listen to the American people. They prefer to listen to groups who consider themselves representative Americans who speak for the silent majority. They are, in fact, nothing more than groups lobbying with a narrow, selfish agenda. They are not representing the American people as a whole. The Constitution was written for all American citizens; and those who immigrated became Americans, vowing allegiance to the United States of America, not to a group that considers itself better than any other group. The Bill of Rights gives all Americans equal rights regardless of race, religion, or creed. Legislation has been passed which divides everyone in America into groups of race, religion, and creed. These groups are now considered "the constituency," their priorities are more important than with the American people or Democracy itself. In a true democracy there is limited government, and Americans are free to fend for themselves.

Americans were always proud of the fact that they didn't need handouts from the government, whereas these groups feel the government should supply all their wants and needs. They will do anything to get it, including controlling congressmen and senators. These groups are only one part of the congressmen's and senators' "constituency." Then there are the business, labor, and environmental groups with their own agenda. Whether these groups realize it or not, they now, through legislation, are removing the "Constitution of the United States of America" in the name of and by the means of "democracy."

The American people have to wake up, otherwise they (American people) will have witnessed the removal of "One nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

P.S. The United Nations Charter includes the Civil Rights Bill and excludes the Bill of Rights, meaning all men are not created equal unless you belong to a group, which is always open for debate.
