

July 3

Dear C-SPAN,

I am concerned about a trend which seems to be more developed on your network than others.

It has to do with the way you disparage the authority of the presidency.

Whether President Clinton gives a radio address or press conference you immediately focus on someone from the opposite party (Republican) who usually criticizes or downgrades or proselytizes, etc.

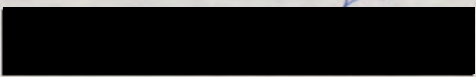

I feel this is a dangerous policy. It is disrespectful. It is a policy not in place nearly as much with past Republican presidencies. It confuses people and contributes to the weakening of the highest office in the land.

I don't know if you're doing this because of your Republican bias, which Brion Lomb has often demonstrated, or because you think it is good policy.

Our country is not impervious to those political events that rock other countries, in these turbulent times, and if the office of the presidency is constantly undercut and treated with disrespect, I think we weaken our whole country and open ourselves to various degrees of disintegration.

Sincerely,

Taylor, MI 48180

002594 JUL 893

C-SPAN (viewer comments)
400 North Capitol ST. NW
Suite 650
Washington, DC 20001

