Dear Sir:

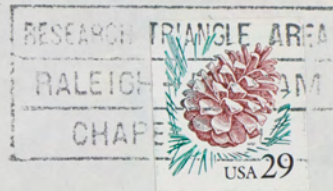

I still enjoy your programs but am concerned about the amount of time spent on "Whitewater." The same stories are repeated on all the stations throughout the day. Enough is enough. When "Whitewater" comes on I turn off my television set. Is the preoccupation with this problem an example of envy and jealousy in our press because the Clintons are young, very bright and have already accomplished many things in life? Many of us support the office of the President and are not concerned about the political party or affiliation. The President represents all Americans.

I too, support freedom of the press, this is why C-Span is valuable to me. But you must strike a proper balance and remember: Innocent until proven guilty. Otherwise the direction and drift of C-Span will be toward Rush who on occasion may be right in what he says, but most of the time, he is boring and repetitive. And a bully. I support his right to be heard but am worried about the general drift of the press toward inuendo and unsubstantiated sensationalism.

Sometime ago, I suggested that you have more members of the foreign press on programs. We need more news about Europe, Asia, and Africa. Foreign journalists usually have broad backgrounds and can comment on events at home, and can give us another prospective on current events in the USA. Can this be done? I also suggested that a portion of Friday mornings be used to briefly review the important events of the week with charts, graphs, maps, etc. What about an historical briefing on Korea? Have we forgotten that China fought with the North in the Korean War?

Sincerely, [REDACTED]
