Dear Brian Lamb,

Since C-SPAN is such a valuable service to our country I hesitate to criticize anything at all. I'm sure much thought, effort and money went into your new format of on-screen information. Much of it is both functional and pleasing; i.e., -when the House is in session especially. It does cover up the "time remaining" on electronic voting. On the call in shows it is extremely distracting--the constant changing from one bit of information to another over and over. If those facts--guest(s), affiliation, address/phone host and subject could simply be given at the beginning and end it would be quite enough.

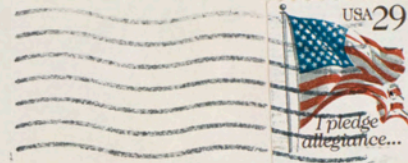

C SPAN was such a low-key, no-frills place--so welcome. Do you think maybe the messenger will outshine the message? Please consider this. We've enough and too many of the slick presentations in the broadcast stations. Thanks again for C SPAN.

Sincerely,
