

Monday Eve.

May 9, 1994

C-SPAN

c/o Brian Lamb

400 N. Capitol St, N.W. #650
Washington DC 20001

Dear Brian,

I watch C-SPAN and C-SPAN II regularly and find it usually great. I did trip in late tonight in your Round Table (of this morning), and want to voice a concern.

Some man seriously brought up a subject - can't recall exactly, about small business and taxes, etc, or earnings.

You gave it to the Washington Post reporter to answer, and his answer was a silly laugh, saying something like "It likes to do as well" etc - I may have it wrong, but you

P.S. I didn't read his book, but I hope Zwaggle won't run as fast as '96. Remarks about the book seem to say I visit more enough to handle it. The press hasn't forgotten him

let it go at that, and in hurry I get in as many calls as possible, went on to another caller.
I feel you or the reporter didn't even give this man a chance. You didn't get Morton K's answer, and I feel, why, would this man <sup>want to</sup> call in again, when he was almost humiliated?
I surely wouldn't. Can't there be a little respect callers wait a long time to get through, and they are laughed at!! For heaven's sake, let's think of the caller occasionally.

Sincerely,

I'm a conservative, but I want the!