

To Brian Lamb,

I became a "C-Span junkie" because the program (Washington Journal) was viewer driven. The host had items to talk about ~~if~~ the viewers didn't participate to make the conversation interesting to all viewers.

Now the hosts are getting very short and nasty to the callers. Even when callers are trying to talk about a subject the hosts ignore that subject and only want to talk about the articles they have chosen as interesting to everyone. Can't they realize if 2 or 3 callers are trying to change the subject that the callers aren't interested in the hosts' selection but are interested in something else.

Many times I want to call but I have not tried as I'm not making this statement because of an experience I've had personally.

Sincerely,

[Redacted Signature]

Sumter, SC 29154-1735

OVER

I forgot another thing. Collers are cut off very curtly (mostly by Connie) when they are supplying good interesting questions for the guests to respond to.

I am fast becoming unaddicted and wonder how many others are too.

