

Secured by a rowl Mother

Historic

A historic cast-iron fireplace has been in a Southside neighborhood since the 1800s. The fireplace represents the oldest of its kind in the city. It was donated by the Church official at 6148 S.E. Laurelhollow. The fireplace has been in the neighborhood since the 1800s.

Five

BY ELIZABETH M. OF THE OREGONIAN STAFF

Five men are vying for the position of Multnomah County Commissioner for District 1 in the primary election. Gary Hansen and the most visible have advertised their names on the lawn signs.

Authentic Dance Lessons from the WORLD'S LEADING DANCE STUDIOS.

10 LESSONS

Only $100*

SINGLE!
OVER 35?
LEARN TO DANCE
START TODAY

*Offer Ends Soon. New Students Only.

Arthur Murray
Dance Studios
Franchised

The Balch Creek Task Force report.
■ Goose Hollow Foothills League, 6 p.m., ProData, 1423 S.W. Columbia St.
■ Northwest District Association Board, 5:30 p.m., Northwest Service Center, 1819 N.W. Everett St.
■ South Burlingame Neighborhood Association, 7:30 p.m., Fulton Park Community Center, 88 S.W. Miles St. Elect officers and discuss a recycling survey and plans for the Terwilliger Bridge.

■ Southeast Democratic Club, 11:30 a.m., Holgate House, 4601 S.E. 39th Ave. State Labor Commissioner Mary Wendy Roberts will give an "Overview of the Labor Commissioner's Office."

■ Southeast Uplift Board, 7 p.m., Uplift office, 3534 S.E. Main St.
■ Land Use Hearings Office, 7 p.m., Meeting Room C, second floor, S.W. 5th Ave. Consider application for a zone change at 16711 S.E. McKinley Rd.

TUESDAY

■ Women Voters of Portland League holds the first of its May general meetings at 7:15 p.m. to discuss whether Portland's form of government requires change.

Don Balmer, political science professor at Lewis and Clark College, and Robert Stacy, acting planning director for the city of Portland, will lead. A second discussion takes place at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday, when Chris Tobkin, executive assistant to the Mayor, will share the forum with Balmer. Both meetings are at Westminster Presbyterian Church, 1624 N.E. Hancock. Admission is $1.50 for members and non-members.

Yes! If you want to learn last, and right...and now!

Bain has not filed letters recommending an early release for health reasons, said Jim Eckland, executive assistant to the board.

Raatz said seeking justice is the first duty of the parole board.

Regarding the board's December decision, Raatz said, "For me, at the point of that hearing, the health issue was not relevant."

Bain maintains she is not a heartless killer.

"The whole thing was a very horrible experience," Bain said. "There is no way I can justify a death and I used in such a crime.

"She does care about other people," Anderson said. "Of course, this was a dastardly thing that she did.

but I'll tell you that district attorney ripped her up in court from one side and another. . . . Apparently, that's what the parole board is going on."

The parole board may recommend an early release because of Bain's cancer. Raatz said in a recent interview. Nevertheless, he doubted the board could reduce her sentence below the five-year minimum that state law requires when a firearm is used in such a crime.

Raatz said he had great sympathy for Bain. The officer accompanied her during the visit to the doctor.

She spends her days quietly alone in her small, locked room near the doctor.

In February, Bain spent about a week in Salem Memorial Hospital, where doctors removed a cancerous breast. A tumor is pressing against the nerves in her left jaw and she takes pain pills around the clock.

Bain said she is examined by one of her doctors every six weeks. A state car parked in a nearby prison lot. The officer accompanied her during the visit to the doctor.

and takes her by wheelchair to a corrections officer handcuffs her and takes her by wheelchair to a state car parked in a nearby prison lot. The officer accompanied her during the visit to the doctor.

She spends her days quietly alone in her small, locked room near the doctor.

She spends her days quietly alone in her small, locked room near the doctor.

Association, 7:30 p.m., Forest Park Community Center, 360 N.W. Greenleaf Road. Discuss the Balch Creek Task Force report.

■ Goose Hollow Foothills League, 6 p.m., ProData, 1423 S.W. Columbia St.

■ Northwest District Association Board, 5:30 p.m., Northwest Service Center, 1819 N.W. Everett St.

■ South Burlingame Neighborhood Association, 7:30 p.m., Fulton Park Community Center, 68 S.W. Milles St. Elect officers and discuss a recycling survey and plans for the Terwilliger Bridge.

■ Southeast Democratic Club, 11:30 a.m., Holgate House, 4601 S.E. 39th Ave. State Labor Commissioner Mary Wendy Roberts will give an "Overview of the Labor Commissioner's Office."

■ Southeast Uplift Board, 7 p.m., Uplift office, 3534 S.E. Main St.

■ Land Use Hearings Office, 7 p.m., Meeting Room C, second floor, S.W. 5th Ave. Consider application for a zone change at 16711 S.E. McKinley Rd.

TUESDAY

■ Women Voters of Portland

League holds the first of its May general meetings at 7:15 p.m. to discuss whether Portland's form of government requires change.

Don Balmer, political science professor at Lewis and Clark College, and Robert Stacy, acting planning director for the city of Portland, will lead. A second discussion takes place at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday, when Chris Tobkin, executive assistant to the Mayor, will share the forum with Balmer. Both meetings are at Westminster Presbyterian Church, 1624 N.E. Hancock.

Admission is $1.50 for members and non-members.

Yes! If you can't learn to dance today, start tomorrow!

SINGLE! OVER 35! LEARN TO DANCE START TODAY!

10 LESSONS Only $100*

Authentic Dance Lessons from the WORLD'S LEADING DANCE STUDIOS.

FIVE

By ELIZABETH M. of The Oregonian staff

Five men are vying for the position of Multnomah primary election.

Gary Hansen and the most visible have advertised placing lawn signs

Secured by a rowful Mother

Historic

friend.

immune the state could impose.

Bain has not filed letters recommending an early release for health reasons, said Jim Eckland, executive assistant to the board.

Faatz said seeking justice is the first duty of the parole board. Regarding the board's December decision, Faatz said, "For me, at the point of that hearing, the health issue was not relevant, the crime was relevant."

The parole board may recommend an early release because of Bain's cancer, Faatz said in a recent interview.

"She does care about other people," Anderson said. "Of course, this was a dastardly thing that she did, but I'll tell you that district attorney where doctors removed a cancerous breast. A tumor is pressing against the nerves in her left jaw and she takes pain pills around the clock."

Bain said she is examined by one of her doctors every six weeks. A corrections officer handcuffs her increase from their patient. But Bain says her cancer has progressed.

In February, Bain spent about a week in Salem Memorial Hospital, where doctors removed a cancerous breast. A tumor is pressing against the nerves in her left jaw and she takes pain pills around the clock.