Dear Brian Lamb:

I try to catch Booknotes on a regular basis; it's a program I enjoy greatly and your interviewing skills are superb.

← The Michael Medved interview causes me to write.

While the man has some decent arguments, he has beaten on the film "Revolution" with Al Pacino many times. Unfortunately he has very little understanding of the American Revolution and he doesn't seem to have really viewed the film in a critical way, that is analyzing it in light of accepted writings of historians most of us read in college and in some high schools. It certainly doesn't glorify the British while completely disparaging the Americans. It simply tells it pretty much as it was.

I urge you to see the film and judge for yourself.

Sincerely

P.S. It was certainly a "G" rated film so he should have been quite happy.
