

9 July 1998

Brian Lamb, (and gang)

What a pleasure it was to watch and hear the interview with Deborah Orrin, Washington Post reporter, on the morning of July 7, 1998.

In fact, what a difference from most such interviews.

No bangs, no eye-grabbing coiffure, no startling dress (or lack thereof), no dangling-jangling earrings, no mascara, no fake eyelashes, no eye-liner...and no hot, flaming red over-done lascivious lips and mouth suggesting Monica-esque FELLATIO on demand...no skirt pulled up around her pelvis exposing lush (or lumpy) thighs and a barely hidden Mountain of Venus taunting and tempting the salivating salacious among us with slurpy thoughts of CUNNILINGUS.

Like WOW!

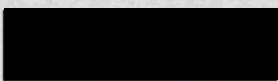

Different!

Most unusual!

Viewers could concentrate on her discussion, her responses, her reasoning, her arguments, without GENDER, SEX getting in the way.

How about a suggested (if not imposed) dress code for your female guests in the future? Use Deborah as a role model? a female guest to be emulated?

Often yours (so please don't respond)

San Luis Obispo, CA 93405

o.w.)

Dear Traveller:

You recently requested information on videotapes of Caribbean destinations, and we are pleased to send you a complimentary copy of the 1997 Caribbean Vacation Planner for your enjoyment and guide to booking your next holiday.

This planner is the official publication of the Caribbean Coalition for Tourism, which represents all of the governments of the Caribbean region, airlines and hospitality industry.

If you are interested in finding a travel agent who knows the Caribbean, we can provide a member agency located in your neighborhood by calling 1-800-931-ACCT and ask for operator #2.

Best wishes from the Caribbean. We hope to see you here soon.