

Austria, St. Johann in Tyrol, 20. July 88

Hello C-Span !

I've written this letter after another long night in front of my TV-Set. It's very interesting getting information about american policy 'first handed'. In Europe you get information too, but you know that there's some distance between Europe and America. And for us there's not really the american election campaign the important thing, but more the questions after the election. What will the new President do about worldtrade without any restrictions. What will he do about the american forces in Europe ? What can he do in the arabian golf ? So it's interesting seeing the other side of the whole business !

The question after the election gives George Bush in Europe (or Westeurope) a clear favourite role. Cuz the foreign policy of Reagan is a known, and I don't think that Bush would change anything of importance.

But Dukakis is an unknown variable. We don't know that much about an Governor, I think, from the Mid-West.

I also want to comment that you think we Europeans are some ET's, who don't know where America is. I think that the percentage of finding America on a worldmap is better for European kids.

In our TV-News there's everyday a report about America or something linked with that kind of stuff. Cuz we can't ignore America. Our stock markets hold breath each time when the new trade deficit of America is announced.

So we're not that of ignorant about American issues than the Americans about European.

But at the end thanx for your live-coverage of the Democratic Convention. I hope you're going to send me a button (if it's possible a democratic and a republican) and one booklet about conventions (cuz I can also use this in school in our english lessons).

Thank you that you've read this letter (in spite of the horrible mistakes) and for sending me your booklet and buttons. I hope I'm not missing any of your coverages in the future.

Sincerely,

[Redacted signature]

PS: My address is:

[Redacted address]

St. Johann - Austria

Austria, St. Johann in Tyrol, 20. July 88

Hello C-Span !

I've written this letter after another long night in front of my TV-Set. It's very interesting getting information about american policy 'first handed'. In Europe you get information too, but you know that there's some distance between Europe and America. And for us there's not really the american election campaign the important thing, but more the questions after the election. What will the new President do about worldtrade without any restrictions. What will he do about the american forces in Europe ? What can he do in the arabian golf ? So it's interesting seeing the other side of the whole business ! The question after the after gives George Bush in Europe (or Westeurope) a clear favourite role. Cuz the foreign policy of Reagan is a known, and I don't think that Bush would change anything of importance.

But Dukakis is an unknown variable. We don't know that much about an Governor, I think, from the Mid-West.

I also want to comment that you think we Europeans are some ET's, who don't know where America is. I think that the percentage of finding America on a worldmap is better for European kids.

In our TV-News there's everyday a report about America or something linked with that kind of stuff. Cuz we can't ignore America. Our stock markets hold breath each time when the new trade deficit of America is announced.

So we're not that of ignorant about American issues than the Americans about European.

But at the end thanx for your live-coverage of the Democratic Convention. I hope you're going to send me a button (if it's possible a democratic and a republican) and one booklet about conventions (cuz I can also use this in school in our english lessons).

Thank you that you've read this letter (in spite of the horrible mistakes) and for sending me your booklet and buttons. I hope I'm not missing any of your coverages in the future.

Sincerely,

[Redacted signature]

PS: My address is:

[Redacted address]

St. Johann - Austria

there's some distance between Europe and America. And for us there's not really the american election campaign the important thing, but more the questions after the election. What will the new President do about worldtrade without any restrictions. What will he do about the american forces in Europe ? What can he do in the arabian golf ? So it's interesting seeing the other side of the whole business ! The question after the after gives George Bush in Europe (or Westeurope) a clear favourite role. Cuz the foreign policy of Reagan is a known, and I don't think that Bush would change anything of importance.

But Dukakis is an unknown variable. We don't know that much about an Governor, I think, from the Mid-West.

I also want to comment that you think we Europeans are some ET's, who don't know where America is. I think that the percentage of finding America on a worldmap is better for European kids.

In our TV-News there's everyday a report about America or something linked with that kind of stuff. Cuz we can't ignore America. Our stock markets hold breath each time when the new trade deficit of America is announced.

So we're not that of ignorant about American issues than the Americans about European.

But at the end thanx for your live-coverage of the Democratic Convention. I hope you're going to send me a button (if it's possible a democratic and a republican) and one booklet about conventions (cuz I can also use this in school in our english lessons).

Thank you that you've read this letter (in spite of the horrible mistakes) and for sending me your booklet and buttons. I hope I'm not missing any of your coverages in the future.

Sincerely, [REDACTED]

PS: My address is: [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] St. Johann - duskia