Dear Mr. Lamb:

Saturday evening, the name of Rebozo came up, and I learned that he had been at the funeral.

I never believed the rumor. It was a financial matter.
There is a long-held belief in this country that the best possible candidate for President is a man of wealth who did not struggle to get that wealth.

When a person comes up a la bootstraps, there has to be financial problems. Reagans got friends to finance more than any I know. They sold their home and now lease a home purchased for them by friends.
The Clintons difficulties well influenced by his low salary and need for money.

I do not believe that a Governorship prepares a person to handle foreign affairs, or to be Commander-in-Chief.
The media influence is mixed. It is necessary not to coast up. But it is not necessary to attack. I sometimes long for the 60's and 70's.

Sincerely,
