re: death of C-Span viewers in U.S.

Being a devotee of C-Span, I see the serious importance of the U.S. citizen being brought into the developing stages of the new world "changes".

I am aware of the vast numbers of American's reluctance to subscribe to Cable and feel that it is due to the many years of apathy towards world affair info.

Because it will take time for our citizens to cultivate the valuable habit of wanting to be informed, the Cable industry should band together and with government financial assistance get the facilities in place throughout the nation as soon as possible, possibly subsidizing the subscribers ^{costs}.

Cordially,
