

[REDACTED]
Kington, New York 1240,
September 9, 1997

Dear Luis:

In the unfolding of recent events in London and in the world we have witnessed one of the great truths of history:

The queen reigns, but the people rule.

In the sorrow, anger and guilt all have spoken. In the speeches we learn of the abandonment of solemn vows and sacred honor; of children; and of this woman cut adrift to make a new life for herself without the shelter and support she so desperately needed and deserved.

O. Prunee

I was really surprised and displeased by the attitude of the two reporters a couple of days ago.

C/span is a great treasure.

Sincerely,

"The moving finger writes... and not all your tears nor all your sighs will e'er erase a single word".

My most memorable quote from Le Torqueville that I had revealed years ago is: "Democracy will die when a people lose their ability to choose their proper leaders".