-- NATIONAL GOVERNORS' ASSOCIATION MEETS IN BOISE --

-- C-SPAN Covers Governors' Conference and Idaho Business/Politics --

WASHINGTON, D.C.-- If you think of potatoes when you think of Idaho -- think again. The National Governors' Association (NGA) thought twice and we at C-SPAN did, too.

On Saturday, August 3rd, C-SPAN begins four-day coverage of the NGA summer meeting by first exploring Boise, Idaho -- the backdrop for the Governors' conference. C-SPAN call-in programs and roundtable discussions with leaders from Idaho state government, business and commerce, and political journalists will examine issues facing the state's decisionmakers.

Then on Sunday, August 4th, C-SPAN begins more than 25 hours of live cablecasts of the Governors' work sessions, primarily focusing on marketing state goods for international trade. In addition, C-SPAN call-in programs give viewers the chance to express opinions and to question the Governors about individual state's concerns. C-SPAN will also televise a roundtable discussion with political journalists from major daily newspapers who will discuss the significance of and press coverage of the NGA meeting.

For three years, C-SPAN has been providing its nationwide cable audience with an insider's look into the NGA winter meetings in Washington, D.C. This year marks the first time C-SPAN cameras will take to the road for the Governors' summer meeting.

A preliminary C-SPAN program schedule is as follows:

NBC to phases out 'The Big, Proud N'

First it was "The Big N." Then it was "The Proud N." Now it is "The Dead N." NBC's trademark is going the way of new, improved Coke: Off to the land of corporate clinkers.

NBC will be phasing out the "N" over the coming months and introducing a new symbol that combines a redesigned version of the NBC peacock with all three letters of NBC's name.

"The Big N" should disappear entirely by next June, when the new symbol will have completely taken over.

Decisions on such weighty matters are not made capriciously. This one took years. It was always the goal of former NBC Chairman Fred Silverman to phase out "The Big N" and replace it with the peacock, a symbol that Fred rescued from the corporate attic (parent company RCA had used it in the '50s and '60s to push the sale of color TV sets) because he thought the peacock denoted "pride" in NBC's programming.

NBC executive vice president M.S. Rukeyser Jr., vacationing in the south of France, said from his expensive hotel there that Silverman ordered up something called "The Proud N" as a transitional symbol in the interim. "Proud" is a "Big N" with a peacock embedded in it. Rukeyser conceded that "The Proud N" was something of a flop, one which will now follow Freddie into exile.

"The peacock is round and sort of playful, while the 'N' is rigid and geometric, and they don't work together," Rukeyser said. High-priced designer Ivan Chermayeff is now putting finishing touches on the new peacock, which will be "simplified" so that it will look better in print. The old one tended to turn into a seashell when reduced in size to fit on company stationery.

"Instead of 11 feathers, the new peacock has six," Rukeyser patiently explained. "Each feather will be a different color, and each color will be a signature for a part of NBC." Rukeyser said the timing for making these monumental changes seems just right. After all, NBC is on the upswing in ratings, and next year NBC celebrates its 60th anniversary.

"Since the company's doing better, it seems a good idea," Rukeyser said. "Everyone thought it would be a little insane when we were in the dumps to start worrying about our logo."

Rukeyser declined to authorize release of a picture of the new peacock on the grounds that NBC affiliates should see it before it is released to us of the outside world. That may not be until November, Rukeyser said. Then he hung up the phone and went back to his bouillabaisse.

And so, as it must to all "N's," death comes to the big one. It's hard to remember now, but this stalwart letter was born in a huge brouhaha back in 1976. It was then that NBC unveiled the "N,"

Q & A

Cliches abound on television

I'm an elderly movie and TV fan and I've observed, over the years, that the statement, "Let's get outa here," appears somewhere in almost every film production — often without cause. Is this a trademark, or does it have some other specific significance? — K.C.S., Merritt Island, Fla.

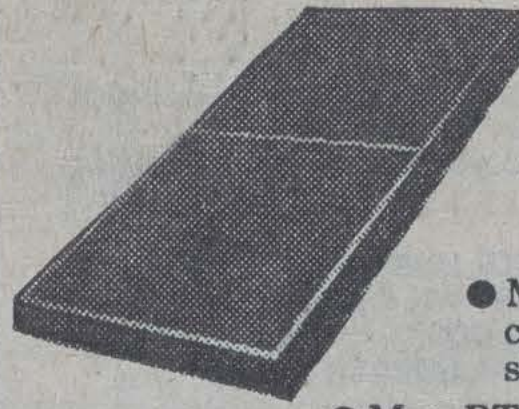

No, it's just cliché dialogue scriptwriters fall into using again and again; fits all kinds of situations involving heroes and villains. Like, how many times have you heard Kitty (or fill in any name) in Gunsmoke say, "Matt (or fill in any name) . . . be careful."

I have just finished watching The Great Caruso on HBO, starring Mario Lanza. Other than this most enjoyable movie, could you tell me what other movies Lanza made? — R.Z., No. Plainsfield, N.J.

Lanza, who was only 38 when he died, made just seven movies, and his voice was heard in an eighth. Besides Caruso, he did Midnight Kiss, '49; Toast of New Orleans, '50; Because You're Mine, '52; Serenade, '56; Seven Hills of Rome, '58; For the First Time, '59. And he did the voice-over for Edmond Purdom in Student Prince, '54.

Delta Burke's dreams come true

By MIKE HUGHES
Gannett News Service

Back when she was on the beauty-queen circuit, Delta Burke couldn't help catching a sense of sadness.

"I saw girls well into their 20s, still trying to win," she said quietly. "What a way to spend your 20s."

Burke knew exactly how she wanted to spend hers. She wanted to be in Hollywood, to be a star. And somehow, she's made it.

In First and Ten, the sitcom that opens in August on HBO, Burke plays a glamorous young widow with her own football team. That follows her role in Filthy Rich and a string of guest shots.

She's doing just what she's always dreamed of. And beauty pageants seemed like the only way to get there.

"I was doing anything I could to be a star in Orlando," she said. "I did all the pageants. I was in them to be a star, and I told people that."

It's a passion that has controlled her life for as long as she can remember.

Burke grew up in Florida, an only child for her first seven years and a happy kid in a dreamy sort of way. "I would go out in the woods and act out all these characters."

She didn't fit into teen life at school, and searched for a shortcut to Hollywood. She was perfectly suited for the beauty pageants the South is so fond of.

Burke is a classic southern beauty, with jet-black hair, a warmly round face, and a glowing presence. She even has that catchy first name, provided by her semi-quirky family.

Soon she was skipping classes to enter contests. She barely graduated, but at 17 she was Miss Florida, doing a drama scene in the talent contest.

She missed the final 10 in the Miss America pageant, but savored her year in Florida's spotlight. "I was everywhere. I kissed everything at Sea World ... I was very good with public relations, and it gave me stage experience."

It also gave her a bundle of money, which she used for a two-year stay at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Arts. Then she headed to Hollywood; "I knew they like 'em young."

In this case, "they" had something special. Producers of the 1979 TV movie Charleston wanted a new Vivien Leigh type; they picked Delta Burke.

It was everything she had dreamed of — except that she and the film were roundly panned. Burke remembers sneaking into a theater for an advance screening and hearing the audience groan. "I wanted to rip off my wig and run out of there ... I had to make my mistake in front of millions of people."

But she stuck with the dream. A role in the mini-series The Seekers restored her respectability and led to a string of guest spots, plus a regular role on the southern comedy Filthy Rich.

designed by the firm of Lippincott and Margulies, as a replacement for its previous trademark, called "The Snake" because of the way the "C" in "NBC" curled down under the "N" and the "B." Little did NBC realize what a can of worms the "N" would open.

Soon after the unveiling, NBC was informed that it had violated the copyright of the Nebraska Educational Television Network, which had unleashed its own "N" on the world eight months earlier. NBC had spent about $750,000 to develop its "N" and Nebraska ETV had spent less than $100 on its, but, "N"-barrasingly enough, the two symbols were almost identical.

NBC's costs went up still further. To escape litigation over ownership of the trademark (and avoid dragging "The Big N" through a long, messy custody battle), NBC gave Nebraska ETV $500,000 in new equipment in return for exclusive domain over the "N." NBC also gave the Nebraskans another $25,000 to develop a new logo of their own. They came up with what might be called "The Small n," since it's lower-case.

Now everybody is happy, although Jack McBride, who for 30 years has been general manager of Nebraska ETV, says that some of the cameras NBC gave him nine years ago have conked out and been retired.

Asked if he would like to reclaim "The Big N," now that it is a free agent again, McBride said, "I doubt seriously that we would be interested in returning to that. Actually we, in a very democratic process, had developed in-house three different possibilities for a new logo at the time, and the one NBC later took was the winner only by a very narrow margin."

Apparently no more tears will be shed over the departure of "The Big N" than were shed over the ugly "snake." Said one NBC insider, "It really doesn't tell the story, and it is kind of cold." And getting colder. For "The Big N," it's The Big Chill. But for NBC, all's well, you might say, that "N's" well.

Can independent TV stations survive?

By DAVID CROOK
The Los Angeles Times

What happened to Channel 23? When KNAT-TV, an independent television station in Albuquerque went off the air at the end of April, few people outside of New Mexico noticed.

Like scores of other independent stations around the country — stations not affiliated with any of the Big Three commercial networks — KNAT had a relatively weak signal and an undistinguished program schedule that had attracted few viewers and fewer advertisers in its brief three-year life.

Then, a TV industry trade paper reported who owned the station: Johnny Carson, Neil Simon, Paul Anka, David Letterman, Joan Rivers and others.

With such well-known names attached to it, the demise of tiny KNAT attracted the attention throughout the television industry, and the station has become practically a textbook example of what can go wrong in the volatile business world of local TV.

At a time when some independent TV stations are commanding astronomical sales prices and revenues surpassing network-affiliated stations, KNAT failed miserably. Its celebrity owners have lost an estimated $8 million in a business that, until now, has been thought to be just about the closest thing there is to a guaranteed money maker.

Behind KNAT's failure are all too common mistakes, miscalculations and missed opportunities that, TV industry officials say, promise to force other independent stations like KNAT out of business in the coming months and years.

"There are going to be more independents going under or broke in the next five years than in the history of independent television," Greg Nathanson, vice president for programming of Los Angeles-based Golden West Television, told a recent luncheon audience of the Hollywood Radio and Television Society.

Across the country, the number of independent stations has grown from 121 in 1980 to more than 214 today. The Washington-based Association of Independent Television Stations estimates that another 25 may go on the air within the next 12 months. The association expects about 300 independent stations on the air by 1990.

Like Albuquerque's darkened KNAT, 181 of these new stations are on the traditionally less desirable UHF (ultra-high frequency, channels 14-83) television frequencies. UHF stations have neither the signal quality nor the extended coverage area of VHF (very high frequency, channels 2-13) stations.

In the very largest cities, independent TV stations remain hot entertainment properties.

But outside of the very largest cities the ratings often aren't so hot. Advertising rates haven't kept pace with the cost of programming.

"You're going to find a lot of these new independent stations go bust. Advertisers look at the ratings and say, 'Well, this is all I'm going to pay you,'" insisted Max Sklower, vice president and general manager of ABC-affiliated KOAT-TV.

That is what happened to KNAT and what industry officials say is about to happen everywhere else.

If more independent stations fail in the coming years, the financial impact on Hollywood studios and syndication companies could be devastating, possibly ending the prolonged boom in the syndication business that has become a financial mainstay to producers and distribution companies.

Hollywood has grown financially fat as those new independent stations aggressively compete for the rights to air reruns of hit network series such as Three's Company, *M*A*S*H* and Magnum P.I. Last year, for example, MCA-TV (Universal) sold Magnum for $120,000 an episode in Los Angeles and $98,000 a program in New York. According to industry reports, sales of The A-Team have already topped the records set by Magnum.

Such programs are commanding as much as $7,000 an episode in Albuquerque, where commercial time often can be bought for less than $100 a minute.

"I think we'll see a lot of KNAT's around the country go dark," said Jerry Danziger, general manager of KOB-TV, Albuquerque's 31-year-old NBC affiliated station. "The advertiser isn't going to pay more for commercials just because you paid more for programming. They're still going to buy by the numbers (ratings)."

The specifics of KNAT's demise are disputed.

In the weeks since the station went off the air, charges and countercharges have flown like tumbleweeds across desert highways. Local broadcast executives have claimed that syndication companies, fearful of offending Carson, allowed the station to go for months — perhaps as long as a year in some instances — without paying its programming bills.

In turn, people associated with the KNAT have made equally unsupported claims that local broadcasters informally conspired to keep programming and advertising rates low and forced the station out of the market.

Rusty Durante, vice president and general manager of independent KVVU Channel 5 in Las Vegas, was instrumental in getting KNAT on the air. He oversaw the station's first year of operations.

"It's a sad story... KNAT had a lot of bad luck, and there was really nothing anyone could do about it," Durante said in an interview in his Las Vegas office.

Hoping to re-create the Las Vegas success in Albuquerque, the Carson interests moved swiftly and aggressively into New Mexico. Local advertisers were feted at a Carson-hosted gala in Las Vegas. Early on, Carson appeared in KNAT promotional ads. That sent local NBC affiliate Jerry Danziger complaining to NBC, which saw that Carson's on-air appearances for his station ended.

The programming costs skyrocketed as four independent stations went on the air in Albuquerque within a two-year period. First, KGSW-TV started up in 1981. Carson's station followed in 1982. The following year in nearby Santa Fe, KNMZ-TV debuted on Channel 2 and KCHF-TV began operating on Channel 11.

TV cameras break free of L.A.

Palm trees. Brilliant sunshine. Relatively clean, wide-open city streets. A lack of genuine skyscrapers. An abundance of luxury cars, most notably Mercedes and Rolls-Royce.

That's the subtle California look on television, a visual style that's been dominating the prime-time landscape since the late 1950s when ABC became the first of the major networks to move most of its entertainment programs to the West Coast. Even when a program is supposedly set in New York or some other Eastern or Midwestern city, the telltale signs of Los Angeles are frequently in evidence to a sharp-eyed viewer.

But that prime-time emphasis on L.A. now appears to be fading appreciably. In the last two years — and particularly in this coming fall season — an increasing number of TV shows are breaking free of Hollywood. They're taking their cameras back to New York — not to mention Boston, Miami, Chicago, Washington, Texas and even Great Britain.

Consider the number of returning nighttime programs that already devote most of their production to areas far from Los Angeles:

Magnum, P.I., the still-attractive CBS caper show starring Tom Selleck, films entirely on location in beautiful Hawaii, mostly on the main island of Oahu; Selleck's nemesis, the supremely successful Bill Cosby comedy series, tapes every inch at an NBC studio in a lower-middle-income section of Brooklyn; Dallas on CBS divides its time almost equally between outdoor settings in Texas and indoor scenes shot in L.A.; the NBC detective hit Miami Vice does virtually all its work in South Florida, with occasional scenes filmed in New York; and Kate & Allie, the popular CBS comedy, is done 100 percent in New York.

In addition, the CBS soap opera Falcon Crest spends nearly half its time filming in Northern California and in the San Francisco Bay area; Cagney & Lacey on CBS spends a lot of time in New York; and Hill Street Blues, which is produced mostly in Skid Row areas in Los Angeles, nevertheless enhances its gritty appeal tremendously with opening and closing credits — plus many outdoor scenes — filmed on the often mean streets of Chicago.

And when the new season premieres in September, ABC will present at least four new weekly programs that'll be produced almost entirely outside of Southern California.

For instance, the new Robert Wagner show, Lime Street, will film in Washington, D.C., nearby Virginia and in London. As a globetrotting investigator who lives on a horse farm and works occasionally overseas, Wagner will produce his entire program away from Hollywood. He's also planning an episode to be based in Chicago.

Robert Urich, who starred in the sleazebag crime series Vegas for several years, is very hopeful that his new detective show, Spenser: For Hire, will be a big step up in class for him.

Based on the popular detective novels by Robert B. Parker, Spenser will be shot entirely in Boston — and Urich, his actress-wife Heather Menzies and their two children have moved their home to the Boston suburbs in preparation for the show.

Lady Blue, featuring young Jamie Rose as a sort of female Dirty Harry, just began production in Chicago. The Thursday night cop show wants to take advantage of that town's pictorial beauty, not to mention its frequently contradictory street squalor.

And Our Family Honor, a classy series about the war between the families of a Mafia kingpin and a police commissioner, is shooting most of its street action in New York. With Eli Wallach and Kenneth McMillan in the lead roles and the splendor of New York always in the background, ABC is promising that Family Honor will boast the richness and texture of a theatrical motion picture.

This burgeoning trend to take television entertainment away from Hollywood and into other parts of our country is great for diversity and also a potential factor in raising the audience ratings.

Tens of millions of viewers have been lulled into near-catatonia by the overwhelming presence of Southern California in most prime-time programs for the last 20 years-plus. Planting the stars and the cameras in other geographical areas is one way to wake up those viewers — and to lend television a visual aura of something different and more compelling than the bland landmarks of Los Angeles.

NETWORKING: Florence Halop, who appeared several times last season as a pain-in-the-neck hospital patient on St. Elsewhere, has been signed to replace the late Selma Diamond on the NBC comedy series Night Court. Halop will portray a court matron who succeeds the character played by the legendary Miss Diamond, who died in May of lung cancer.

Cynthia Sikes, a regular on St. Elsewhere since the program premiered three years ago, is quitting that show because of dissatisfaction with her role as a doctor.

Liza Minnelli, fresh from taking the drug-and-alcohol cure at the Betty Ford Center in California, has signed to star in an NBC movie called Intensive Care. She'll play the mother of a terminally ill boy.
