Dear Mr. Lamb:

Four months ago I wrote of my continued outrage at your insistence of flogging the foreign owned, ultra right-reactionary Washington Times. I received two replies from C-SPAN. One was a call from a gentleman who asked permission to put my name on a list of people that he would periodically call to ascertain listener views on C-Span. Another was a letter from a lady who attempted to show that C-SPAN programing strived to give equal exposure to the various newspapers in the D.C. area. She attempted to equate The Washington Post to the Wash-Times.

As I previously wrote, I have long ago weaned myself from the hum-drum of everyday C-Span viewing - but I do still random sample your Monday and Friday call-in programs. Imagine my chagrin on turning on my set yesterday morning! I am unaware how many times Wesley Purdin has sneered his way through your programs this year, but it was a fitting albeit sinking feeling to see him help close your 1991 shows. God knows the number of times is was on in the year.

I followed the program until Purdin unleashed his usual litany of distortions in answer to the inescapable listener question regarding the legitimacy of the Wash-Times ... a newspaper owned by a foreign mystic felon and financed by the hidden fascist elements of the government of South Korea. You can call it your duty to be impartial, Mr. Lamb, but by sitting idly by, without some semblance of comment, and allowing Purdin to lie through his teeth as regards the true ownership of the Wash-Times is enough for me to employ the "power off" button on my T.V. set.

For you to afford an equal position on your program to this fraud is inexcusable. At one time, Purdin may well have been a legitimate journalist. He is now no more than a front man of a propaganda rag. A shill for an operation with a miniscule distribution of 70 plus thousand, one that is, therefor, loosing 40 to 60 million dollars a year.

While recently in Washington I was most surprised to hear from an impeccable source that even the staff of the Wash-Times are well aware that the paper's enormous annual losses are made up by money channeled through the Moonies, via the Korean Intelligence Service, and originate from within the Korean government itself. Now I am not whistling Dixie on this. My source is talking about the views of the working (journalist) stiffs inside the paper. The story goes on that the amount pumped into this rag is so huge, that is hard to imagine that some other Intell Service is not helping out! My source looked me square in the eye!

As I am retired CIA I would hate to even comprehend this charge ... but, then again, we did swallow the horrors of the Bill Casey years. Who knows? But for C-SPAN to aid and abet this conspiracy is dead wrong. And now it appears your usually little-informed "call-ins" are catching on.

Sincerely
