I watch C-SPAN because history is the greatest show on earth and C-SPAN records history in the making. We can watch the U.S. House of Representatives every minute that it is in session--from opening gavel to the gavel announcing adjournment.

When the House is not in session C-SPAN is everywhere--at Senate committee meetings, at the three-day Smithsonian seminar on George Orwell, at meetings of groups as varied as the National Association of Manufacturers and the AFL-CIO. The daily live call-in programs resemble a coast-to-coast Town Meeting, with people from all over the country calling in to question the guest of the day.

Sometimes C-SPAN raises my spirits and sometimes it raises my hackles, but it never imposes an interpreter between its viewers and the events being viewed. It respects its viewers' intelligence.

C-SPAN's cameras seem never to sleep--afraid, no doubt, that they will miss something.
