

February 13, 1992

To

C. Span

Following the President's ~~State of the Union~~ address, I listened to the "call ins" and I must say that there was a tremendous amount of hate, malice, ignorance and bias coming over the wires. Only one Republican came to the defense of the President. There was a world of difference in the tone of his comments and those of the callers. Someone said that people tend to criticize others to make themselves look good. Some expressed disappointment because he hadn't addressed one or another of their concerns about what is taking place in the world and in their personal lives. Had the President addressed every problem or concern facing this nation, he could have talked for several months without a break. Let's be reasonable!

His responses such as was expressed that causes contention, suspicion, doubt, malice hatred - none of which is constructive nor needed right now.

Sincerely,

[REDACTED]
Rexburg, Idaho

83440

Senior Citizen

REXBURG, IDA.
83440

C. Span
400 North Capital
Suite # 650
Washington, D C
20001