

July 22, 1997

Dear Sir:-

Although my suggestion for C. SPAN program would take a great deal of planning and work - I'm sure C. SPAN could do it. After the Toqueville series is over, how about the Lewis and Clark expedition? Just think - how you could educate your audience! And this is knowledge none of us know enough about.

I would suggest another series, as "Washington Journal" has become rather stereotyped (dull) ~~was~~ with an array of politicians and political pundits from the press. To do another series would be "a breath of fresh air."

Congratulations on the Toqueville series (I'm reading Democracy in America with you. Having local people, professors, and students and high school teachers on it is a ~~real~~ relief from journalists and politicians. Thank you for C. Span -

Sincerely-

Wilmington, NC 28403

S-WJ

(over)

I heard a good suggestion today for Washington Journal which I endorse. - Having more people on program with knowledge of a subject, rather than stereotyped opinions.

