Dear Mr. Lamb,

A freelance newspaper journalist and I were talking. The conversation went something like this:

"I really like the way Brian Lamb interviews people. He's my favorite." The professional writer said, "You're kidding. We laugh at his style, the way he asks questions." I got a little steamed and said, "Why? He's interested in presenting information. He doesn't make himself important. There's no fawning, no fake congeniality, no nonsense. He's great."

So, on behalf of the millions of students you teach every day, I present to you the enclosed Certificate of Achievement in recognition of your dedication to presenting the facts. Just the facts ma'am.

Best regards,
