Dear Mr. Lamb

As far as I'm concerned Washington Journal has lost its objectivity — you were, for me, the last bastion — now that's gone.

Right now, Bill Crystal is making eloquently in his denunciation of Pres. Clinton.
You let him continue on ^{and} on, on his soapbox — no one is there to counter him.

C. Span has now become a tool of ^{and} for conservatives.
Of late, I turn to see which politicians ^{and} for journalists are on — that depends whether I keep it on or not.

There are many other issues crying out to be heard. But no, it has to be

Clinton — that's where the money is — and the conservative hatred of him.

Your response to one of the disillusioned callers was — "Why don't you turn it off?" (when it's not to your liking.) That's not an answer — it's your defense. You should know that most all news/commentary programs now just switch talking heads repeating the same thing — most anti-Clinton.

I've got to get to work.
But I feel I lost another program which I respected.

But all things are passing — this, too, shall pass.

I dread to think what these programs will be like when the "Star or Report" comes out —

Sincerely,

I'm in Phila. — and I can never get through.
