Dear Madam Vice President:

You were the moderator of the Sunday Journal program on Sunday last. You discussed stories in the far left liberal rag, your network love to quote and whose staffers dominate your journalistic "helpful" guest list. You take two or three viewer calls in one ten minute segment. To get a sample of papers around the country. There was a story that had top billing in the Sunday Houston Post that you skipped. Could it be that all your favorites missed it? It was the right hand top column page one story. Mr. Lamb always says this is the most important news slot. Now the Post is a very liberal paper like the Washington one. The story detailed all the blunders Slip Willie made at his first formal state dinner held in Seoul, Korea.

1. He arrived, as usual, late for the event. This is considered a horrible breach of diplomatic courtesy.

2. He used an interpreter for his remarks. By prior agreement both he and the South Korean President would speak in their own language. Both speeches were printed in both languages and copies given to each guest.

3. Since he used the interpreter, he was running out of his allotted time. He therefore skipped around in his speech confusing the guests trying to follow the transcript.

4. He had the ~~seps~~ interpreter stand in front of the South Korean President, blocking his view.

5. He called the South Korean President's wife by the wrong name even including when he said goodbye.

In other words he made a total mess of the evening as the liberal Post stated it. The headline said "Clinton Blunder? Highlight State Dinner!" I tried to call, in vain. Did all these liberal rage of which you are so fond omit the story? Perhaps liberal C-SPAN did not want to call attention to Clinton's night of the faux pas.

We all know C-SPAN loves to do a series featuring a bunch of liberals and pass it off as "unbiased". I cite as examples the Texas series featuring eleven current or former Democrat office holders, two ultra liberal feminist columnists - Ely and Joins - out of sixteen programs. Not one Republican office holder was included. In fact the only Republican was President Bush's eldest son - a token I suppose. Then the Oxford scam where it was never mentioned that Dick Miller failed there. The supposed excuse for it was his being a student there. It was just a lame cover-up for presenting a bunch of liberals. Why did you people not say that Dick spent his time demonstrating against his country and hobnobbing with Communists in Moscow, Poland and Czechoslovakia. Maybe he rode in a tank like the traitor Ford did in Viet Nam. So you consider these facts unimportant? Then there was the recent families in journalism series. Four of those participants were from the C-SPAN beloved Washington Post. Why were the Wallenberg father and son left out. Are they too moderate? C-SPAN is getting more liberal with every passing day.

I noticed this morning that you questioned Senator Gramm about a Wall Street Journal piece by a Gerald Stieb. We all know that the Journal's Washington bureau is as liberal as the Post. I can't imagine why a corporation like Dow Jones that depends on the capitalist community to get its revenue would hire a bunch of socialists like Al Hunt to staff it. Perhaps that is why Investors Business Daily is picking up readers and has expanded its news section. You did not say, but did Mr Stieb examine the 1992 results? The 1990 budget tax and spend fiasco saving a half-trillion dollars allegedly had not taken effect in 1990. It passed a couple of weeks before election. Look at the defeats and bailouts in 1992. Now this deal Stieb is pushing will take effect long before the 1994 election. I bet the results will be different on that election. Why are so many Democrats bailing out? Look at Frank Lautenberg. He has a perfect liberal voting record. Why is he afraid to step up and back his President? They had to get Al Gore to break a tie to pass it. And they did not have votes to spare as was first reported. There was no other Senator willing to stick his neck out. Kohl of Wisconsin is running scared. That story is probably a scam old Hunt thought up. I hope some of them take his advice. It will be bad for the country, but it might get rid of some liberals in 1994.

I realize that C-SPAN has a vested interest in wanting big government. If the Federal government did what it should, we would not have enough to fill up your schedule. ~~It would be home~~ Congress would be home over half the time.

I have some suggestions for some music to play while the House votes. It isn't as high brow as your usual selections. When the voting starts, play Steven Sondheim "Send In the Clowns" from his delightful musical done in total in a waltz time "A Little Night Music". While the voting proceeds, you could play "Folk Rhapsody" an old standard piece, very new and soothing to the ear. Finally you can close out with "What Kind of Fool Am I" from "Stop the World I Want to Get Off" an Anthony Newley vehicle. It would be fitting while they stand around near the close of voting looking like fools that most of them are. Your viewers will love it. It might upset the only "native American criminal class," as Samuel L. Clemens so aptly named them, that you people trust with such deference and pardoning.

I am sorry to have to unload on you. You seem a very ~~other~~ personable and intelligent person. Just change your liberal ways and line up to your promptly false advertising that you are "unbiased and balanced". The actions belie the words.

Yours truly,

Murisonville, Sep 7 1984
