Dear Program Director:

I am an avid fan of C-SPAN, and very much enjoy the wonderful job you are doing. Keep up the good work!

Would you be good enough to search your records for the name of the professor (I think) from a Midwestern (I think) university, who has done an extensive study (or book) on the giveaway of valuable public resources to special private interests.

He appeared on C-SPAN about 2 months ago, I believe. His point was that the national debt could be considerably reduced through the revenue from these public resources if the government charged reasonable prices for mineral, oil, gas, grazing, timber rights, etc.

I would very much appreciate getting the name and title of this person, as well as the title of his book, if there is one.

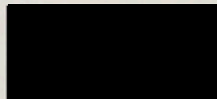

I enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for your convenience.

Cordially - and gratefully - yours,
