Re: NAFTA

Since the United States of America is owned by the American people, why not force the issue of NAFTA to a vote by American Citizens, THE OWNERS OF THE COUNTRY?

The House and Senate are more or less HIRED by Americans who put them in office by our votes to represent the people WHO ARE DEFINITELY NOT PAID ANY PAC MONEY to influence the vote of the issue one way or the other.

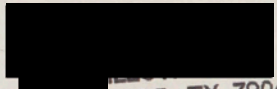

I have tried to call C-SPAN a number of times during House and Senate members discussion of the issue to ask this question, but as everyone knows, it is almost impossible to get through.

It seems as though the loyal opposition of both parties does an awful lot of finger pointing at each other while thinking that the American People WHOM THEY ARE SUPPOSED TO BE REPRESENTING are nothing but a bunch of boobs who don't have enough sense to think for themselves until it comes to election time when the members of the house and senate do want people to think for themselves and cast their votes for whom they think will serve best the United States Of America.

Would it be a breach of democracy to put such an important issue such a NAFTA into the hands of the voters?
