Dear Brian Lamb:

Congratulations on your superb coverage of the British General Elections. The whole process was simply fascinating and I was glued to my TV set all week. I was only sorry that the House of Representatives session cut the climax of the elections so short. I wish you would replay the whole final event some day. Or offer it for sale in a Video.

You have a superb interviewer in Susan Swain; she covered so many varied and interesting situations. I was very impressed by her tactful, yet insightful, questions, as well as her non-stop energy.

Thank you for scheduling so much British programming. Sky Television is a real addition.

Sincerely yours,

P. S. I really enjoyed your interview with Nan Robertson. I remember her well, way back to the 1950's when she was on the Women's Page. I raced out to get her book, Girls in the Balcony, and read it in one session. She is sparkling and very courageous.

I always enjoy women authors on Booknotes, and she's one of the best. Moreover, your questions brought out some interesting side notes that are not in the book itself. Thanks a lot.
