Dear Brian:

Having viewed your exceedingly cute interview with Richard Holbrooke, I deemed it necessary to forward a copy of a letter I sent to Random House.

Shallow interviews are acceptable to most networks. C-SPAN should have at least some depth.

Yours truly,

RE: "To End A War"

Dear Sir:

I viewed with amusement, Brian Lamb's C-SPAN interview with Richard Holbrooke. My amusement would not be quite as pronounced if I hadn't seen the movie "Wag The Dog" and personally - via TV - heard Dick Morris bragging of advising Bill Clinton, for Public Relation purposes, to declare war on the Serbs. (The advice came, of course, whenever Morris could drag himself away from the toes of his favorite prostitute).

Before making anymore comments about the Sarajevo market bombing, Holbrooke would be well served if he picked up a copy of the Tuesday, July 7, 1998 issue of "Investor's Business Daily." Refer him to a front page story entitled "How Media Shape Foreign Policy."

I do, however, agree with his feeling that Madeline Albright is his kind of gal. Any woman born a Jew, who then switched to Catholicism and finally, to become as "white" as possible, converted to that ultimate wasp religion - Episcopalian, would most assuredly be his ideal.

Having studied history, Holbrooke has conveniently forgotten that during World War II, Croats and Bosnian Muslims at the urging of their German masters, slaughtered tens of thousands of his fellow Jews. As a result, his "peace" efforts helped to extend the fourth Reich from Germany to the Adriatic.

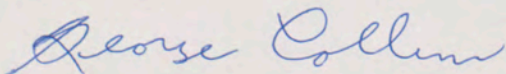

He should further remember that Jews on their knees, did not survive the Holocaust.

In conclusion, may I recommend that:

1. "To End A War" be classified fiction.
2. The title be changed to "My Contribution To The Fourth Reich."

Have a nice day.

Yours truly,

George Collins
